Inaugural Harvard-Harris Poll

This survey was conducted online within the United States between February 11-13, 2017 among 2,148 registered voters by The Harris Poll.

The results reflect a nationally representative sample. Results were weighted for age within gender, region, race/ethnicity, marital status, household size, income, employment, and education where necessary to align them with their actual proportions in the population. Propensity score weighting was also used to adjust for respondents' propensity to be online.

The states challenging President Donald Trump's travel and immigration ban argue that there is no evidence that suggests impending harm from the citizens of the seven predominately-Muslim countries targeted by the ban, that the ban violates legal protections and due legal process, that it has actively and unjustly harmed these state's people and economies, and that the ban is designed to discriminate on the basis of religion.	1078 51%
The federal government argues that suspending the ban is causing harm to the nation by exposing citizens to the risk of terrorism from terror prone regions, that the President is responsible for ensuring and protecting national security, giving him broad authority on immigration issues, and that the executive order is not discriminatory on religious grounds, affecting only a small proportion of Muslims.	1048 49%
